Informed Consent Supplement
Marriage, Family and Relationship Counseling

In addition to the provisions of the Informed Consent you have reviewed, there are a few things you need to know about marriage, family and relationship counseling.

When you invite additional family members or guests into your therapy, there are some changes to the confidentiality provisions of our time together. When I do marriage/couples counseling or family therapy, I keep one record for the session. The regulations in the state of Arizona indicate that information about a counseling session that is attended by more than one legal adult may not be released without the written authorization of all the legal adults that participated in the session. This means if you as an individual ever want a copy of your records or information from a counseling session, it will require the written authorization of all the legal adults that were present for any part of the session. Signing of this form by your guest for the session(s), acknowledges the guest has been informed with the general consent information, read through this document, understands how the record will be handled and consents to participating with you as invited.

You should also know that I believe it is important to practice open, honest and balanced relationship with all parties involved as we proceed through the counseling process. I rarely do individual work with a patient that is in couples counseling unless it is deemed beneficial by all involved to the couples' process. Any significant work needed will be referred to another therapist to make sure I can maintain the therapeutic relationship with all involved. If I receive a telephone call, fax or email or any other forms of communication with one individual, the nature and or content of the communication will be discussed and processed at the next session. In signing this document, you are expressly waiving any confidentiality between us to allowing me to discuss those issues that are related to the therapy.

For parents of children and adolescents, It is a policy of our practice to obtain authorization from both custodial parents in cases with joint legal custody. Documentation for any other arrangement needs to be provided. It is especially important to note the importance of confidentiality for your child. I am committed to helping you keep your child safe and will disclose any information that is directly related to your child's immediate safety. Please know that parents inquiries of what is discussed in session often disrupts the therapeutic relationship between your child and therapist and will likely indicate to your child that therapy is not a safe place to talk through issues which likely brought you/your child to therapy.

Consent is given for assessment and/or participation in therapy under the terms outlined above
